MS Degree in Project Management

In order to pursue its course to success, every organization has to conduct projects that are new, complex and unique from the projects of its competitors. To manage projects effectively and to complete projects successfully, it is essential to have people who are fully conversant with the latest techniques and technologies of Project Management. Analyzing the importance of Project Managers in the country, Bahria University has decided to introduce MS Degree in Project Management (MSPM) program as a department of Management Sciences from Spring-2013. The purpose is to impart professional project management knowledge and skills to the students and make them capable of managing all kind of projects in their respective organizations and future endeavors.

While there are a few universities and business schools in the country that are already engaged in this program, almost all of them focus tightly in classroom studies. Bahria University takes extra efforts to improve the communication skills that are necessary for a project manager to manage his team. It is also a landmark of Bahria University that it exposes its students to the live projects that gives them the first hand information and comprehend theory with practice.

This program is designed for fresh graduates, professionals and practitioners who either work or plan to work in project oriented environment. This is why it has been made a weekend program. This degree prepares students to apply acquired professional knowledge and technical skills to manage projects of all kind.
